Description

About Sulthan Bathery: Sulthan Bathery is the largest town in Wayanad and is historically significant. Originally called Ganpathivattom, it got its current name in the 18th century when Tipu Sultan stationed his artillery ("battery") in the region during his campaigns — hence Sulthan Bathery . The town lies about 1,000 m above sea level and enjoys a pleasant hill climate, with lush greenery, gentle hills, and verdant tea and spice plantations. Jain Temple – A 13th-century stone temple built by Jain traders, later used by Tipu Sultan's forces. It reflects ancient architectural styles and is one of the region's most important heritage sites. Well connected via NH 766 (Kozhikode–Mysore). Nearest Airport: Calicut International Airport (~70 km). Nearest Major Railhead: Nilambur Road (approx 43 km). Property Details: Land Area: 14.5cent.
