Description

About Pulpally: Pulpally is a small but historically and culturally significant town in the Wayanad district of Kerala, not far from Sulthan Bathery. Pulpally is closely linked with Kerala's revolutionary history: It was a key site during the Pulpally Police Station Attack, The attack was part of the Naxalite movement in Kerala during the late 1960s, Leaders like Varghese became associated with this region. This gives Pulpally a unique place in Kerala's political history. It's quieter and less commercial than Sulthan Bathery, making it ideal for a more peaceful, rural experience.
