Description

About Sulthan Bathery: Sulthan Bathery (often just called “Bathery”) is one of the main towns in Wayanad and serves as a gateway to many of the district’s most popular attractions. It’s more developed and busier than Mananthavady, with better connectivity, shops, and tourist facilities. The town gets its name from Tipu Sultan, who is said to have used a local Jain temple as a battery (ammunition depot) during his military campaigns—hence “Sultan’s Battery.” Poothadi is a peaceful rural village near Sulthan Bathery in Wayanad. It’s not a typical tourist hotspot, but that’s exactly what makes it appealing—quiet surroundings, farmland, and a slower pace of life. Easily reachable by road from Sulthan Bathery (a short drive).
