Description

About Sulthan Bathery: Sulthan Bathery is one of the major towns in the Wayanad district of Kerala, located along the Kozhikode–Mysuru highway. It is about 25 km from Kalpetta and serves as an important commercial and tourism center in Wayanad. The original name was Ganapativattam. During the 18th century, Tipu Sultan used a local Jain temple as an ammunition storage ("battery"), which later became "Bathery." Hence the name Sulthan Bathery. People mainly speak Malayalam, though Kannada and Tamil are also heard because of nearby Karnataka and Tamil Nadu borders. Sulthan Bathery has a cool and pleasant climate compared with much of Kerala due to its elevation in the Western Ghats. Monsoon season brings heavy rain, while winters are mild and misty.
